Let's begin today's class!

What's the date today? It's (①) 31. February starts tomorrow.

OK, Rie. Can you begin your presentation?

Yes!

We'll have the graduation ceremony in March. Now, I want to ask you a question.

What's your best memory of junior high school?

2 Actually you already answered my question and I made this graph. Please look at your answers.

First, twelve students answered, "The school trip is my best memory." 3 I agree. That's my answer, too. I took many pictures with my friends then. This is my favorite picture. It's very special to me.

Second, nine students chose "Club Activities." I practiced badminton hard every day and my friends always helped me.

Finally, "School Festival" was chosen by (4) students. I enjoyed singing songs with my friends in a

Entrance Ceremony 2

⑤ So, I think the most important word in my school life is "friends." At the entrance ceremony, I worried about making friends. Now, I have many friends.

Thank you for listening. Do you have any questions?

I have a question.

What does "Others" on the graph mean? Tell us one example.

One student answered, "Studying together in this classroom." I think that's also a good memory. 6 Any other questions?

| 3 次の英文は、高校生の健次(Kenji)さんとアメリカ(America)からの留学生マーク(Mark) さんとの会話です。これを読んで、後の1~7の問いに答えなさい。

Kenji: Hi, Mark. Can I talk to you now?

Mark: Sure. <あ>

Kenji: I'll visit an elementary school to teach English with my friends next month. Will you join us?

Mark: That sounds (①). I'll join you. What are you going to do?

Kenji: I'm thinking about some activities. The topic will be "My Future Dream."

Mark: I see. The children should try to use expressions like this: "What do you want to be?" and "I want to be a singer." They are useful expressions. < \(\mathbf{t} \) >

Kenji: Yeah, ② I also want [by / their future dreams / the children / think about / to] studying this topic in English.

Mark: That's good. It'll be a good chance for them.

Kenji: I hope so. What is your future dream, Mark?

Mark: My future dream is to be a vet.

Kenji: A vet ... a vet is an animal (③), right?

Mark: Yes, it is. I love animals and I have four dogs at home in America. They're my family members and also my friends. What do you want to be?

Kenji: Well, I want to be an interpreter.

Mark: Oh, an interpreter. Why? $< \hat{j} >$

Kenji: I have three reasons. First, I'm very interested in English. Second, I like talking with others. Third, interpreters can help people at important meetings around the world.

Mark: I see. You study English hard and practice speaking English every day.

Kenji: Thank you, but I know I have another thing to do for my dream. You asked me some questions about Japan before, but I could not answer many of them. I need to learn more about Japan and also other countries.

Mark: Me, too. ⑤ The world has changed a lot. We need to imagine the world after ten or twenty years.

Kenji: That's right. Now we can relate to people around the world by using the Internet. My grandmother often says that she never imagined it when she was young.

Mark: I think the Internet makes the world smaller. $\langle \bar{\lambda} \rangle$

Kenji: I agree. The news says that people at some companies speak in English, even in Japan. I understand that because many foreign people work in Japan now.

Mark: Many Japanese people also work in foreign countries. My father is an engineer in America and he works with people from Japan and India. In the office, everyone speaks English.

Kenji: The world has become ... I think the word is "global"?

Mark: Yes. The word "global" means relating to the whole world. We need to understand each other more in such a world. I think English helps us.

Kenji: You're right. English is important to communicate with foreign people. In the future,
I hope to meet you as an interpreter. I'll try hard for my dream.

Mark: You can do it, Kenji. I'll study more about Japan and ask you more questions.

Kenji: [6]

Mark: OK. I'll ask you some difficult ones next time. Nice talking with you.

Kenji: See you.
